What you have before you is a man that has the intelligence to know when bullshit is bullshit and when good intentions said are not true.

These addresses to the greater conscience goes unanswered --- in that there is no more excuses to remain silent in this conspiracy.

This conspiracy terminates by the greater good you have been and will continue to be wrong under the terms that we cannot have a discussion held in complete honesty.

In that you deemed unworthy the claim that gang stalkers can and shall go on to intercede into my life, without the source of this gang stalking to be shown that these actions are wrong, the source reprimanded [ at least in my case ] to the destruction that has been taken here to be oppressive forces of social engineering design.

This matter awaits your full and complete moral agency to know right vs. wrong.

The help and assistance that was placed into a quasi-promise that i would be hearing from won't be the assistance needed to break a conspiracy.

The assistance that was promised me was to denounce my tracking documented to make the connections of these events collectively that is not just written by one but a perspective written collectively my many.

When the time comes that you can sit across the table without contempt for me --- will a balance become realized.

This means that you acknowledge the writings and faxes and respond to them with intelligence, clarity, and relevance without deflection of these considerations.

I am not an idiot even though I may act quirky at times.

You are the ones who need corrective adaptive thinking--- that all is well in this nation and fine.

I am a man of peace agency -- I understand the topics at hand.

You are the ones designed something that has taken and opened Pandora's Box ---

I know how to close it ----

But you hate my choices of lifestyle --- because why?

You are listening to the wrong agenda.

You are listening to the special interests that do not allow for their bigotry of mind to be nullified.

The standard that must apply.

That diversity of the knowing way.

INTRODUCTION TO STANDARDS: V5N1
by Marlon Riggs

Americans have always been more and at the same time less than what we pretended. With the quickening approach of the twenty-first century, greater numbers of us are giving testament to this inescapable fact, challenging the cozy myths by which America has been ritually defined. Who are we? Who are we becoming? Who and what have we been? In the next century, can we even continue to speak (could we ever?) of a collective "we"? For the longest, of course, these questions had simple answers.

America was white. America was male. America was heterosexual. America was Christian. America, above all, was a melting pot into which diverse cultural communities gleefully descended to achieve the social and ideological transformation necessary for inclusion within the American Dream. That many of us--marginalized and oftentimes invisible Americans of African, Asian, Latino and Native descent, as well as women and the working poor--never quite melted and metamorphosized according to this traditional prescription for social progress, hardly mattered. The great distance between the Dream and our actual lives was not due to any fault in the Dream: the defect was in us. The Dream thus survived intact, its seductive power sustained by America's stubborn refusal to look too closely at the hidden but terrible costs of "the good life" and at who actually could--much less wanted to--afford it.

The sixties, of course, spotlighted the complex oppressive regime of thought, politics and culture which underlay the myth of America. For the first time in U.S. history, the ideological fabric of white heterosexual patriarchy was exposed for the life-constricting straightjacket it had always been. Despite conservative attempts during subsequent years at repair, the old social fabric has been steadily unraveling. Thus we have arrived at this present moment, wherein a nation historically averse to serious introspection now exhibits--in its politics and popular media as well as its universities--an almost obsessive reflexive preoccupation with our national identity.

To be expected, much of the current debate is simply a re-hash of old opinion--an attempt to forcefully rebut and undercut the de-centering politics of radical multiculturalism (i.e., the kind of multiculturalism where difference actually makes a difference). Bring back the melting pot. Restore "traditional values." Re-institute prayer in schools. Preserve the primacy of Western civilization (the only one that matters anyway). And not least, protect that critical bedrock of American greatness, "the American family": such pronouncements reveal an intense, even pathological desire to perpetuate a thoroughly obsolete myth of America, and through this, a repressively orthodox system of sociocultural entitlement.

While the ideas of conservative/fundamentalist America are hardly new, the typically strident pitch with which such ideas are now being argued betrays how acutely anxious many conservatives have come to feel, due to both real and anticipated loss of privilege and power. What is more, arch-conservative rhetoric--as should be evident to anyone watching our presidential elections for the past quarter century--has found a certain public resonance. Difference, in the traditionalist outlook, has been regressively equated with disunity; and disunity with profound social chaos and collapse. Just as nature abhors a vacuum, so, it seems, do many Americans with regard to the social-political myths by which they organize and make sense of their lives. Even a fundamentally flawed, repressive, inequitable social order seems to many better than none at all. A clear imperative thus confronts American progressives--that intricate (and frequently fragile) web of communities comprised of people of color, feminists, gays and lesbians, the poor and working class, as well as ethnic whites who value ethnicity, indeed all who have been systematically disenfranchised and dehumanized under the once ascendant "traditional values" of pre-Civil Rights America.

It's no longer enough, if it ever was, to critique interlocking systems of oppression without offering affirming alternatives of how society should and can reconstitute itself. As we move into the inevitably more demanding multilingual, multicultural environment--both nationally and globally--of the next [ this ] century, our greatest task will be an inversion of the commonly assumed equivalence between difference and disunity. We must re-write this equation, demonstrating again and again that unity does not require unanimity, that unity--that is, a sense of social cohesion, of community--can and does derive from the expression, comprehension, and active nurturing (and not merely tolerance or fetishization) of difference.

This is the new standard of civilized life that now demands our urgent labor, a new world order, if you will, that subverts traditional conceptions of social order: a standard which in effect subverts the meaning of the word "standard" itself. For the new order must be comprised of multiple standards: shifting, open-ended, dynamically transforming, so as to engender ways of thinking and living that privilege no one set of cultural differences over another but affirm virtue in all.

This perspective forms the key inspiration and overarching theme in STANDARDS. Page after page eloquently testifies to the commitment of a new generation of America's best and brightest to shaping a radically redefined vision of our future, where old repressive dualisms of race, class, sexuality, gender and nationality no longer reign--a future in which not merely some but all of us are free to explore and express our richest humanity.

Dearest Commander Of Greatness To The Needs To Terminate A "Provable" Hate Conspiracy : Fools Said I : Babe,

San Bernardino Police Department

a human first, a black man next as in #BlackLivesMatter #PoliceLivesMatter down to #AllLivesMatter [ spiral heart graphic ], to then follow the identity that you also hold as "hero status" of award for your courage actions of what is this towns now infamy.

San Bernardino is my hometown. When past times in small talk of where i am from, the mention of "San Bernardino" would engage a conversation response from most people as:

"Where is that?".

I of course, found it amazing that as County of San Bernardino is the largest in our nation, larger than the state of Rhode Island. This place I called home being so large

I would have to get into the mention of course that I was the centennial class

Then of course, I would have to geographically note the start of the first Mission the street a few blocks away.

Now the person on the other side of this conversation seems perplexed they

Now we can get into my first job that manifested from here -- the efforts I put

But you are so full of your all high mighty prejudice that you have derailed at the start. For me, I have no community presence and I have no community have already made that determination of prejudice by my digital footprint I walked in to this home. I am being drawn to tears as I write. I am proud of footprint, by the way.

I am not proud of the outcomes that a nation divided has backlashes upon me as a man that is on a mission of peace. That mission is true, the messages sound and sane.

I am not proud to be a native born resident of San Bernardino that has a mass shooting in its history and that the community will not step up to be a united force of unity in community and stop this onslaught of hate that is being received in my life that puts me here in forced persecution factors as a refugee from hate. The source of this hate has been identified and that I cannot seem to find a person of moral agency to defend me instead of them; even though it is them that is acting unprofessional; acting immoral; acting illegally; and acting insane.

I am not proud to be an American under these conditions that everyone around sees the truth by their way of acting unprofessional toward me, and still continues to hold their belief that this invisible secret that causes this unprofessional response is acceptable to hold against a person, like me.

What did I do you all?

Absolutely nothing; but to follow these words to the letter and place a plain unvarnished tale before the world that I have faith the world outside of this circle of hate that encapsulates me locally to a state of "Informational Quarantine".

Words To Live By

Art thou dejected?
Is thy mind o'ercast?
To chase thy gloom;
Go fix some weighty truth;
Chain down some passion; do some generous good;
Teach Ignorance to see, or Grief to smile;
Correct thy friend; befriend thy greatest foe;
Be just in all things; make amends
For follies past, and, with warm heart,
Forgive, and be forgiven. Let work not words
Thy virtue prove; Go act as well as prate,
And then thy counsels will be strong,
Thy reprimands avail. —ANON

THE province of the historian is to gather the threads of the past ere they elude forever his grasp and weave them into a harmonious web to which the art preservative may give immortality. Therefore he who would rescue from fast gathering oblivion the deeds of a community and send them on to futurity in an imperishable record should deliver a plain unvarnished tale.

----- All of us are quite aware of, and deeply worried by, the disturbing social and political situation of the world is increasingly a place of violent conflict, hatred and brutal atrocities, committed even in the name of religion. We know that no religion is immune from forms of individual delusion or ideological extremism. I must be especially attentive to every type of fundamentalism, whether religious or of any other kind. A duty required to combat violence perpetrated in the name of a religion, an ideology or an economic system, is to safeguard religious freedom, intellectual freedom and individual freedoms. But there is another temptation especially guard against: the simplistic reductionism which sees only good or evil; or, if you will, the right and the wrong. The contemporary world, with its open wounds which affect so many of our brothers and sisters, demands every form of polarization which would divide it into these two camps. We know that in the attempt to be faithful without, we can be tempted to feed the enemy within. To imitate the hatred and violence of tyrants and not to take their place. That is something which you, as a people, reject. Our response must instead be one of healing, of peace and justice. We are asked to summon the courage and the intelligence to resolve today's geopolitical and economic crises. Even in the developed world, the effects of unjust structures and actions are apparent. Our efforts must aim at restoring hope, righting wrongs, maintaining commitments, and thus providing a way of life for individuals and of peoples. We must move forward together, as one, in a renewed spirit of fraternal cooperation for the common good. The challenges facing us today call for a renewal of that spirit which has accomplished so much good throughout the history of the United States. The complexity, the urgency of these challenges demand that we pool our resources and talents, and resolve to support one another with respect for our differences and our convictions of conscience. For "Real Up Human" can't be part of the mold, In writing of this this letter so old.

My hometown of San Bernardino, where I grow up, does not take a serious attempt to find the role of "peace agent" i because I have bipolar disorder, hiv/aids, am an gay male homosexual who happens to hold a digital footprint of a label known as "The Dirty". The social services of Ryan White Care Act violate privacy of their clients among other offenses. This hate conspiracy is collaborated by negative outlook Glassdoor employee tier reviews of these federally funded agencies. As clients we have no voice. The leadership of these agencies have used #GangStalking tactics against me to remove my presence in their local community condoning and endorsing the hate memeplex within greater community.
